

Dr. Jay's Children's Grief Centre - Camp Erin Toronto

Created by Dr. Jay Children's Grief Centre

Due to the Covid-19 Pandemic, 2020 Camp Erin Toronto Dates have been Canceled.

Dr. Jay's Children's Grief Centre provides care, support and education to grieving children, youth and their families in Toronto around death and dying, while building strength, resilience and hope.

This is accomplished through one-on-one counselling, support groups, family events, and education.

Dr. Jay's Children's Grief Centre is Eluna's Camp Erin Toronto partner. They also have printable resources on their site.

As leaders in the field of children's grief and palliative care, the Centre's innovative programming recognizes that the impacts of living with terminal illness and grief are unique to each individual within a family.

They integrate psychoeducation and support to ensure there is a continuity of care for clients that is responsive to the strengths, needs and relationships in each family. Programs include counselling, group and family supports, and bereavement camps.

The Centre's programs employ a mix of creative, play-based and arts-based approaches. This model encourages the need for honest, open communication for the children involved and supports family members in further developing coping and communication skills to grieve and remember, together. The Centre staff develop and deliver education and clinical consultation for professionals, volunteers, and the community at large about the unique needs of children facing terminal illness and bereaved children.

Who do they Serve?

They accept referrals for families with children under 21. Services offered to support grief related to dying or death of a sibling, parent or custodial caregiver. For bereavement referrals, services are offered to all bereaved children and youth, regardless of the cause of death or time since the death.
